What Is Dale Farm?

Dale Farm is the largest Gypsy and Traveller community in the UK, comprising of about 1,000 residents settled in Crays Hill, Essex. The community extends onto land owned by the portion of the settlement. A number of enforcement notices ordering the removal of homes and caravans from the land they occupy was served by the Basildon District Council (BDC). The eviction concerns some 90 families, comprising of about 300 people, including many children, elderly and infirm.

Who Are The Families Living At Dale Farm?

Most are Travellers of Irish heritage, with their own language, culture and musical traditions, who have a history of nomadism even older than the Roma with whom they share part of what is virtually a village, the largest of its kind in the UK. It is estimated that there are some 350,000 Travellers, Gypsies and newly arrived Roma in Britain today, the Roma having first arrived in the early 16th century. Under the Race Relations Act both Gypsies and Travellers are recognized as ethnic groups. For the Gypsy and Traveller community travelling has social and economic functions as it permits social organisation and flexibility, and makes trading possible. But the community has been up against discrimination for generations. Under planning law the question of who is a Gypsy revolves around land disputes and has threatened their right to maintain a separate identity as an ethnic group. Many have had to give up their nomadic lifestyle because commons and other stopping places have been closed, and police harassment has increased, especially since the Criminal Justice Act gave extra powers to local authorities to move on caravan-dwellers. A unique way of life, which has existed since time immemorial, is threatened because the differences in outlook between traditional nomads and settled house-dwellers have yet to be successfully resolved. All Gypsies and Travellers want is a legal place to station their caravans and mobile homes.
Dale Farm Community Eviction Timeline*

1970’s

Some 40 families settle on Green Belt in Crays Hill and get land ownership titles and planning permission from the local Basildon District Council (BDC).

1980-2000

More residents arrive. They buy the land but cannot obtain planning permission, despite the Green Belt land being used as a licensed scrap yard from 1978 until 2001.

2005

The central government issues ODPM Circular 1/2006 and asks councils to play a central role in ensuring that everyone has a ‘decent home’ and that Gypsies and Travellers are treated no differently from others. The Circular states clearly the Green Belt can be used in ‘exceptional cases’. The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government rejected 7 appeals by the Travellers by concluding that the harm to the Green Belt and the community from the unauthorized Dale Farm encampment outweighs the likely impact of eviction.

2006

BDC refuses to grant planning permission and votes to take direct action, setting aside some 3 million Euros for an eviction operation. Dale Farm community secures a temporary injunction preventing their eviction until a decision can be taken on whether to grant them a judicial review.

2007

Legal aid is granted to Travellers to fight their appeal against eviction. They submit a planning application to develop on land that is owned by English Partnerships, a government agency, at Pitsea, still in the Basildon area. BDC rejects the application and the community submits an appeal to the British government. The East of England Regional Assembly decides on the allocation of land based on the need assessments made by the councils. Essex is asked to find 371 new pitches; of these, 81 shall come from Basildon.

2008

The Regional Assembly reaffirms the decision to ask BDC to find 81 new pitches for Travellers and Gypsies. BDC rejects the methodology used to reach this figure and threatens legal action. The Traveller’s appeal goes before the British High Court, which decides to halt the eviction of 86 Traveller families from Dale Farm. BDC appeals the High Court ruling.

2009

The Court of Appeal issues a ruling overturning the High Court decision and allowing BDC to proceed with the eviction. However, court ruling maintains that BDC may not render the Travellers homeless, and must make alternative arrangements. The UN Habitat Advisory Group on Forced Evictions visits Dale Farm, and recommends a freeze on evictions. The Department for Communities and Local Government requests BDC to provide sufficient land for 62 additional pitches.

2010

On 10 December, BDC selects the private bailiff company Constant and Co. (Bedford) Ltd to undertake planning enforcement action. This company is the UK’s most notorious anti-Gypsy security firm, responsible the brutal Twin Oaks eviction, in Hertfordshire in 2004, when chalets and private property were needless burned.

Community Responses to Planned Eviction

The Dale Farm community is feeling a combination of extreme frustration and now desperation at news of the decision of the BDC to hire Constant & Company bailiffs to forcibly evict them from their homes.

Mark Taylor has made Dale Farm his home since 2004 and reacts to the news with concern for the communities’ children and elderly. Taylor says, "The children will be most affected because they are in the local schools and the elderly will suffer because they will have to leave their personal doctors." However, Dale Farm spokesman Richard Sheridan, President of the Gypsy Council, shares Taylor's concerns and has told BDC that families have no intention of leaving the district even if forced out of Dale Farm. "We'll not move more than a mile and hope this way to keep our children in the same schools and with the same GPs." Most have made this area their home for many years and could not tolerate being uprooted again.

Margaret Sheridan, a resident since 2001, states, "I want to stay with my family and they should either let us stay on our own properties or tell us where we can legally move it. We are human and we all hold British passports."

Malcolm Tully, of Life Church, expresses his frustration with the often negative perception of the Travellers. He says, "The Dale Farm people are just like us, but marginalized out of ignorance. They are a hospitable, loving and welcoming community."

Dale Farm Housing Association with the assistance of COHRE and the Essex Human Rights Clinic is pursuing legal advocacy strategies to ensure all rights are realized:

► Legal memorandum to BDC addressing the circumstances under which the eviction of Dale Farm will be carried out, with the aim of proactively advising BDC to assure that the residents’ human rights are respected and protected. The memorandum encouraged dialogue between BDC and the Dale Farm community with a view to developing negotiated alternatives to the eviction and encouraging the application of national and international human rights law to resolve the conflict. Submitted in August 2009.

► Petition to the Early Warning and Urgent Action mechanism of the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination demonstrating the presence of a significant and persistent pattern of racial discrimination against the Gypsy and Traveller community of Dale Farm, de facto exclusion of the residents from political, economic, social and cultural life; and the lack of an adequate legislative framework and protection mechanisms regarding access to housing and protection against forced evictions. The community seeks to prevent the eviction and further violations of other fundamental human rights, such as access to education and health care. Submitted in February 2010.

► Information to the UN Special Rapporteur on Adequate Housing requiring the issuance of a letter of concern to the Government of the UK to halt the eviction of Dale Farm considering the eminent human rights violations that would result from the implementation of such eviction, which involve damage of a very grave nature to the residents. Submitted in April 2010.

► Meeting with Essex Police Authority to discuss the risk assessment of the eviction process and to ensure that BDC and Constant Co. obey the law regarding health and safety and the international human rights law regarding forced evictions. Scheduled for April 2010.

Human Rights

The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, ratified by the UK on 20th May 1976, provides in Art. 11 for the right of everyone to an adequate standard of living including adequate housing, and to the continuous improvement of living conditions. One of the principal aspects of the obligation to respect the right to housing is the duty of the State not to allow forced evictions to occur. According to international human rights law, ‘forced eviction’ consists of the permanent or temporary removal against the will of individuals, families and/or communities from the homes and/or land which they occupy, without the provision of, and access to, appropriate forms of legal or other protection. According to the United Nations, "instances of forced evictions are prima facie incompatible with the requirements of the ICESCR and can only be justified in the most exceptional circumstances and in accordance with the relevant principles of international law" (General Comment n. 4 of the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, para. 18 and Resolution n. 1993/77 of the UN Commission on Human Rights).
